I have been suffering from some diffuse hair loss for many years now. A hair transplant would be just too much trouble going through and therefore I looked around for an alternative.

My hair situation has been stabilized after a consistent treatment with non-medicated options, using keratene retard in combination with keratene advox, for a better control of the existing hair density.

I found that prohairclinic. micro hair pigmentation can be used to create a nice shaven head appearance. After researching the internet I came to the conclusion that the Italian Tricopigmentation version of micro hair pigmentation is widely accepted and used by many hair restoration clinic.

As such I found Prohairclinic in Belgium, they have been offering Tricopigmentation for many years and are internationally known for their excellent work.
After debating with the kind people at Prohair I have pulled the trigger and will have a shaven look procedure later on this month.
So far I have been very pleasantly surprised by the friendliness and honesty by which I was informed about the procedure (during free Skype meeting).
I will come back to document later on, after the treatment as I see there are very few people sharing their hair pigmentation procedure.
